David and Denise Miller were 12 months behind on their mortgage when they retained United Law Group to prevent foreclosure on their Central Florida home. The firm worked with Countrywide to prevent foreclosure on their home and reduce their rate to 7.75%. With the $402 a month savings the Millers can get caught up on bills and stay in their home.

Irvine, CA (Vocus) June 18, 2009 -- United Law Group, the leading provider of legal foreclosure prevention and foreclosure litigation services today announced that the law firm saved David and Denise Miller's home from foreclosure. After David lost his job as a handyman, the Millers fell several months behind in their payments. They attempted to work with their lender but after three months, were told the lender wouldn't accept any attempt to repay the past due bills. Fearing that they'd lose their home, the couple contacted the United Law Group.

"We were trying to get ourselves back on track but the lender didn't want to hear it," said Mr. David Miller. "United Law Group worked with the lender to save our home and reduce our payment from $1,478 to $1,076 per month."

The Millers were in a bad situation and attempted to work with their lender on their own. With the value of their house falling, and no work to be found for either of them, they feared the worst.

"We tried to handle it ourselves," said Mr. Miller. "But our lender refused to talk to us. It took time but United Law Group stopped the foreclosure and saved our house. There's no way we could have done this without a law firm like United Law Group."

United Law Group filed a lawsuit (case number 30-2009 00121999) against Bank of America and Countrywide in April of this year for tortuous interference with contract, defamation (slander) and unfair business practices (pursuant to B&P Code §17200).

"We believe that every honest American deserves a fair chance to stay in their home," said Sean Rutledge, Managing Director for United Law Group. "We know the tactics used by the banks and pursue every legal channel to help people. The Millers are an example of why it pays to work with a law firm when trying to prevent foreclosure."

About United Law Group:
